Gen. Hawley Says They Are Better Fighters Than Bowery Toughs.

REPUBLIC SPECIAL.
Washington, Feb. 20.—Senator Hawley, chairman of the Committee on Military Affairs, called on the President to-day with a young man who wants to go in the army. Somebody asked General Hawley if he did not think the House regulations were too severe and if some hazing was not necessary to toughen and harden a boy to military service.

to toughen and harden a boy to military service.

"That is all a mistaken idea," said General Hawley. "I had two men on my staff during the war who would go into hell if necessary to do their duty, and yet they were so tender-bearted that tears came to their cyes to see any one in pain. I had rather rescruit a regiment from a Sunday-school than from the bowery or any place where boys are taught to take hard knocks and care for themselves. In the end the Sunday-school boy will remain on a field of battle longer than the other."

LOCAL MERCHANTS SURPRISED.

Did Not Anticipate an Early Rush of Business-This Market Is Benefited by the Rate to New York.

All of the wholesale houses were thronged with buyers yesterday. Millinery and dry goods merchants were especially busy, but trading was heavy in al! lines. The rush was earlier than usual, and, al-though wholesalers were expecting a boom, they were somewhat surprised at its magnitude and its early arrival. Merchants in all sections of the country have done good business throughout the last year, and are unusually prosperous. As a result, their stocks are low, and as they have plenty of unusually prosperous. As a result, their stocks are low, and as they have plenty of money, they are buying freely.

In speaking of the heavy movement in dry goods, Forrest Ferguson said:

"There is fully 25 per cent more buyers in St. Louis than I ever saw before at this time, and their purchases are large. Merchants, as a rule, appear to have plenty of money, and are hopeful of the future, so they are buying accordingly."

The low rates made from all parts of the Southwest to New York, via St. Louis, instead of injuring St. Louis traders, have proved a benefit to local jobbers, as they have caused many merchants who otherwise would have stayed at home to undertake the trip. These merchants stop over in St. Louis, and in nearly every case have been so attracted by the bargains offered by local jobbers that they have made their purchases in this city. Clothing manufacturers and jobbers are reaping a harvest, and their sales in the last few weeks have been phenomenal.

St. Louis is now recognized as one of the largest clothing manufacturing centers in the country, and on account of their unequaled shipping facilities, manufacturers in the country, and on account of their unequaled shipping facilities, manufacturers in this city are able to make prices with which jobbers in other cities cannot begin to compete. St. Louis manufacturers have also gained an enviable reputation for the style and quality of their clothing, and the trade-marks of local houses are guarantees of durability as well as of reasonable prices.

SCOURING THE CITY FOR HORSE THIEVES.

Detectives Think the Gang Which Is Operating in the Country Has a "Fence" Here.

Detectives Keely and Skidmore are scouring the city in search for the gang of norse thieves, which has been operating extensively in St. Louis County and surrounding territory for the last three months. A tip came to the department yesterday when D. A. Brennan of Catawissa, Frankwhen D. A. Brennan of Catawissa, Frank-lin Ccunty, Mo., reported to Assistant Clief of Detectives Smith the theft of two horses Sunday night. A horse belonging to him was taken from its hitching place in front of the Baptist Church, near Roberts-ville, and another from the barn of Clark Whitsett, near by, on Sunday night. Some of the church members saw the man take the horse from the church and ride away.

of the church members saw the man take the horse from the church and ride away, but supposed it was the owner.

When Brennan discovered his loss, he at once set about to search for his horse. By a peculiar shoe which it wore he traced it all that night nearly to St. Louis, where he is positive the horse was taken by the thief. While he was searching the neighborhood, he found where half a dozen other barns had been visited in the last few days and horses stelen. A few nights before three horses were taken from a neighbor's barn, and the general impression prevails that they have all been stolen by the same grag.

Political Row in Texarkana Over Post Office Appointment.

REPUBLIC SPECIAL

Texarkana, Tex., Feb. 20.—After an exhaustive research of ten days or more, C. H. Moore, special agent of the Senatorial Post Office Committee at Washington, returned to his headquarters to-day. He had been sent here by the committee to investigate the fight that was made against J. H. Blckley, the Republican machine favorite for Postmaster at this city. So many statements pro and con toward Blckley's application had been sent into Washington from here that the committee suspended action until they could be perfectly convinced as to the true merits of the situation.

Moore made an extensive investigation of the charges that had been lodged in Washington, and from all that could be learned he found that they were based upon political rivalry, and had no foundation whatever. Moore's canvass among the business and other representative men of the city revealed the fact that Blckley's record from his earliest boyhood was without a blemlsh, and that his appointment as Postmaster at this city was very much desired. In view of this result it is confidently believed that no further opposition will oppose his confirmation by the Senate, and that his appointment is only a matter of a few days.

PROTEST AGAINST EDUCATION BILL.

Committee of Catholics Sends a

P. J. Keily, F. C. Townsend, J. L. Horns-by and B. F. Brinker.

P. J. Kelly, F. C. Townsend, J. L. Hornsby and B. F. Brinker.

The protest states in part:

"The proposition of compulsory education is unamerican and undemocratic. It is a decided encroachment upon the principles of the greatest liberty to the individual consistent with public welfare. It is a long stride in the direction of paternalism in government and is furthermore unnecessary. The education of the child, and the privilege of determining the manner, means and quantum of such education, is the natural and, should be the legal right of the parent, not of the State. The right of the parent in the child is superior to that of the State. The State is not organized nor does it exist to destroy the family, nor to invade it, nor to interfere with it, but to respect and protect it. Any steps tending to invade or to interfere with the family organization and government is a dangerous innovation in the legislation of the State, and one for which, in the present instance, there is no occasion whatever, as the natural affection of the parent for the child impels him more strongly than the force of any statute law to give his child every facility for education that his circumstances will permit. This rule is of course subject to certain exceptions, but they are so few that they do not require or warrant any such radical infringement of the parental rights as is contemplated in the proposed bill.

"We Catholics are not opposed to the education of our children, but on the contrary believe it is to us an imperative duty. But we are opposed to godless education. We support our own schools and send our children to them, not because of what is taught in the public schools, but because of what is not taught there. We believe that it is necessary to train the child's moral and religious nature as well as his mind, and the lack of this training in public schools is unsatisfactory to us."
